DEMONSTRATING THEORY

Progressing into the session, various slides were shown in order to understand the topics being discussed. Starting from simple basic topics such as Shutter speed and properties of Focus, the lecture gradually went on teaching more complicated aspects of the modern-day camera like the use of white balance and Sensor Mirror. Students were also briefed about the history of camera and why the camera is how it is today.

Furthermore, the session discussed the importance of ISO and the need of using correct Aperture in an environment of low light. The discussion included personal experiences from the instructor making it easy for the students to understand the need and use of certain features of the camera.

The slideshow presentation ended so that students could have a hand on camera and try the new techniques and information that had been talked about. The students tried taking photos, in which an object in motion appeared to be frozen, tried using ISO in a dim lit room and were made to try the Automatic Bounce flash by Canon and much more.

Learning outcome: Students learnt a lot about the fundamentals of photography through a demonstration – cum – lecture. The discussion had an active participation from the side of the students also. Students were handed professional camera by canon to reflect the learnt information in the photographs taken by them. All in all, the experience was one of a kind and probably helped in better understanding of photography.
