Carefree Spree....

Having fun is the best way to learn." - Albert Einstein

We need to create special moments now and then to keep our spirits up. Over the past few months, our lives have changed. We and our children are not able to socialise as much as we used to in this new normal. Today, we just have our virtual world to host, attend and enjoy all our social gatherings. So, making the most out of what we have, we all decided to have a virtual carefree spree to enjoy the best as we can.

As the guardians of our little angels it is our responsibility to brighten up their world and ours. They need to feel involved, wanted, loved and cared for. So to boost their moral and to keep their emotional quotient high, Bal Bharati tries and always plans innovative ways to keep our beloved children indulged in numerous activities, fun games, quizzes, celebrations, etc.

Celebrations are essential to feel motivated, happy and zesty. We believe it is important so we planned and threw an amazing virtual party. A party to take their pandemic blues away and to lift their spirits. Everyone came together and celebrated in the best of their capacities. It was a small celebration to mark the end of the wonderful quarter and to announce the beginning of much awaited summer break. Several themes were planned by the teachers of each grade to excite their children. Here are some highlights of the event classwise.

Class I: Not only did they send beautiful virtual invites but they also planned a dance session with the dance teacher. The children danced in frenzy and imitated their dance guru with full energy. Colourful props and foot-tapping music added sparkle to their already lit party. It was a fantastic jamboree.

Class II: They planned a friendly dance-off to pump up the little dancers. Short stories and small chats were also shared to bond with the children. The little ones enjoyed the whole plan and had their light snacks with smiles on their faces.

Class III: Grade III painted the virtual party with bright and lively colours with their enthusiasm. Their party started with small talk where teachers asked all the children to share, discuss and express how they feel these days. Then they enjoyed some singing and dancing activities. They also played games like tongue twisters, guess the name, etc.

Class IV: Children joined the merriment and had a whale of a time with their super energetic teachers. They danced, sang, mimicked and even cracked jokes. The children were quite happy and felt special as they got a chance to connect and party.

Class V: The party of grade V was full of the joys of spring. There was dancing, singing, talent showcase, talking, listening, laughing and lots of connection building activities. The children shared and expressed their affinity for some great artists and even sang a few songs to pay their regards to their idols.

It was great fun for the little minds and an escape from their routine lives. Even parents agreed that this initiative cheered their children and encouraged them to return to their classes with high spirits.
