DATE : 04.05.2022, Wednesday

CLASSES : IV-V

THEME : Book Review- A Boy and his Tree

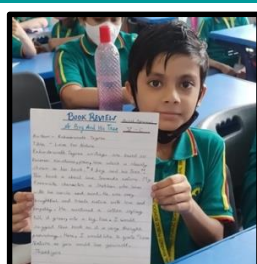

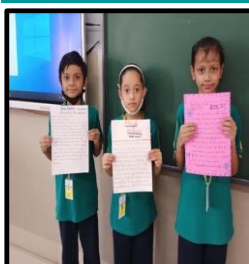

"The one who plants trees, knowing that he will never sit in their shade, has at least started to understand the meaning of life."

REPORT

Commemorating the birth anniversary of a great writer, playwright, composer, philosopher, social reformer and painter, a book review was organised for classes IV and V. To teach the values of empathy, care and humanity a famous story written by Rabindranath Tagore was chosen. A synopsis of the story and author's life was narrated by the class teachers to make students excited for the story. They were then asked to read the story and our avid readers participated enthusiastically in the activity.

On the day of the activity, students wrote critically-sought analysis of the characters, story and even the learning that they took from the story. They adorned and supported their analysis with a suitable title and drawings. A pledge to plant and save more and more trees was also taken by the students. The activity took place in the respective classroom in class teacher's period and the best presentation was appreciated by the teachers.
