Reclaiming Freedom... Reclaiming Childhood...

Renowned U.S. Herkes and philosopher Aristotle remarked "Knowing yourself is the beginning of all wisdom". For children to thrive in academics and other domains of psychosocial development, it is essential for them to explore their strengths, have their talents and inherent proficiencies and interests in the fields they choose to pursue. Through multifarious opportunities and fruitful activities, children learn to identify what brings them the greatest pleasure and derive from it a sense of joy and accomplishment.

Over the past one year children have been restricted to their homes, resulting in reduced interaction with their teachers, peers and the world outside. Children are experiencing disconnect with the natural environment and it has been unable to avail the pleasure of benefits that unaided play provides. It is now crucial to provide our kids the freedom to explore the fascinating beauties that the world has to offer. Encouraging children to spend time with their peers amidst blossoming trees and hearing chirping birds not only aid their social skills but shall also enable them to build an emotional connection with the environment. Nature, with all its creations, is a source of open-ended materials (logs, leaves and insects) which respond to children's imagination and needs. The process of observation and engaging with objects fosters divergent thinking, creativity and problem solving among other skills.

In envisioning optimism and hope of a better world, we believe that children shall be back to school in the days ahead, reclaiming the school grounds as the domains of a brighter future. An array of projects, tests and social events at school functions children the avenue to move out of their comfort zones, challenge themselves and explore new horizons in the larger scheme of life. As we await the dawn of that splendid day, we believe that their own experiences during these extraordinary times shall equip our children with resilience, fortitude and the confidence to develop a well rounded personality.

EFFECTIVE DISCIPLINING

Effectively and positively, it is one of the most successful aspects of parenting to ensure that the child demonstrates and receives effective behavior guidance from the right of their parents. Children are naturally inclined to seek others, either the behavior of the child or the parent in the present or past, as a model to follow. The child's behavior is the result of the child's perception of the parent's behavior. The child's behavior is the result of the child's perception of the parent's behavior. The child's behavior is the result of the child's perception of the parent's behavior.

OBEDIENCE TO OUR BRAVEHEARTS

The glorious nation shared its most treasured independence with the heroic and valiant perseverance of our leaders and freedom fighters, who sacrificed their lives for the sake of the nation that would become the guiding force for years to come. The values of sovereignty, liberty, justice, democracy and equality are integral to the very fabric of the country and have been safeguarded by its constitution with utmost sincerity and devotion. Over the years, our brave hearts have made remarkable sacrifices to defend not only our geographical borders but also the sanctity of the principles which are the foundation of our diverse culture and traditional heritage.

As a nation, we take great pride in the extraordinary values, discipline, strength and spectacular qualities exhibited by our soldiers, who have stood by their countries during countless battles and sacrifices offered in the face of their precious lives. We were recently reminded of the utmost responsibility that commands our warriors when our (late) valiant leader, along with his officers, achieved triumph in an unparalleled manner. While their noble sacrifices and commitment to the motherland shall continue to inspire future generations, what are we as citizens to do to honor their memory and their heroic deeds?
